“The primary goal of estate planning is to protect and preserve your family, not to protect and preserve family assets.”

As financial professionals, we constantly admonish our clients to make sure they have properly planned for their incapacity and death. Unfortunately, our focus often begins and ends with the execution of proper documents and the titling of assets. We often fail to make sure the client’s family and decision-makers will have adequate information about the client’s assets, liabilities and intents. For example, how many children know where a parent wants to be buried, or whom the pallbearers should be? What happens when you cannot find the password to a parent’s computer that holds all of the information you need to manage their affairs? While many clients are reluctant to discuss the tragedy of their death or disability with family members, they have less concern about leaving written information behind. This is the purpose of The Family Love Letter.

Fundamentally, estate planning is not about the dead and the avoidance of a death tax. Instead, its most important goal should be to provide “A LEGACY FOR THE LIVING.”

Your incapacity or death will radically impact your family. Far too many people have the perspective of Paul Simon’s song, Flowers Never Bend with the Rainfall: “[I will] continue to continue to pretend that my life will never end”...Seventy percent of Americans do not have an estate plan.¹ Failure to plan and a failure to provide basic information in virtually every case will create family conflict, cause the dissipation of assets you have spent a lifetime building, or result in the payment of income and estate taxes that might have been avoided easily.

The incapacity or death of a family member is always a traumatic event. However, the emotional turmoil and family pain often are magnified by the resulting confusion over the plans, assets and desires of an incapacitated or deceased family member. The mental foginess that accompanies the family’s trauma is exaggerated by the inability to make basic decisions — because of the lack of basic information.

TAKE NOTE:

Because each person’s facts and family are different, this document does not provide legal, tax or accounting advice. Please consult with competent advisors with regard to the tax, legal and accounting aspects of your planning and the documents you should have as a part of your planning.

“The only thing you take with you when you’re gone is what you leave behind.”

A Few Examples May Help

- In August of 1997, my father was committed to a long-term nursing facility because of Alzheimer's. I spent four days going through his papers (and making endless phone calls) trying to locate basic information about his life, long-term care, health and disability insurance policies, determining whether he had filed his income tax returns, and discerning his assets, debts and benefits from military service. Even after going through the process, I never was quite sure I had a full grasp of all the things I should know. The Family Love Letter is designed to minimize substantially this lingering worry.
- Years ago, I had a client who carried a significant life insurance policy. The premium was paid automatically from his bank account. Long since, the policy had been lost in a clutter of papers, but the automatic debiting of the account kept the policy alive. When the man no longer was able to handle his own affairs, his children terminated his bank account and transferred the father and his assets to the city of one of the sons. They had no idea that they also inadvertently had terminated (for non-payment) a significant life insurance policy on their father until after he died a year later. If there had been a Family Love Letter, they might have kept over a half million dollars in life insurance coverage — lost as a result of the inadvertent mistake of caring children.
- A widowed client came to our office for a consultation. He had no children. No one had any knowledge of his personal assets or liabilities. In his documents, he appointed an old friend as his executor. We provided him with a copy of The Family Love Letter and encouraged him to create a notebook of all his important documents. When he died, his friend was able to pull out his notebook, which included The Family Love Letter, and see that he was to be buried next to a deceased wife who died 20 years before. He knew who his pallbearers were, and what the memorial should read. After death, the letter gave the executor and our firm the basic information about his estate, including the ownership of several vacant tracts of land in other states — assets we might have had a difficult time locating without the list.

We have designed this Family Love Letter to provide “INFORMATION IN A TIME OF CONFUSION” and help minimize the types of inadvertent mistakes which often occur in these times of turmoil. While the document certainly will help save time, that is not its primary purpose. The primary purpose is to reduce the confusion and stress that almost always accompanies the death or disability of a loved one.

We recommend that clients complete the document, keep a copy with important records and, perhaps, provide a copy to family member(s) and/or professional advisor(s). In many cases, clients have provided a copy of The Family Love Letter and their other estate planning documents to their beneficiaries. The client may call a family meeting where the advisors and beneficiaries can discuss both the documents and the desires the client has for his or her family using a Family Mission Statement as the catalyst. This meeting assures that those who will be making decisions upon the client's death or disability know what the client wants to see happen. These meetings encourage a broad range of discussion on topics, including areas of potential conflict (e.g., choice of trustees) that the client might not have anticipated. It also allows the advisors to gain a greater understanding of the family dynamics that may impact the client's plans.

Because the information in The Family Love Letter is only one part of the larger estate plan, we also have provided in the document basic information on other documents the client should consider signing. Additional value-added materials on estate planning and tax planning can be found at our Web site: www.scrogginlaw.com.

Fundamental Estate Planning

Before you start developing your estate plan and focus so much attention on taxes, step back. Reorient your perspective. Fundamentally, estate planning is not about death and taxes. Instead, it is about the legacy you leave behind when you no longer can help your family. Will you leave chaos? Or, will you leave a well-conceived plan with information to help your family in its confused times?

Estate planning consists of three principal elements: a plan designed to provide for the disposition of your assets in the manner you desire (at the least possible estate and income tax cost), the execution of documents that properly provide for your incapacity and death, and detailed facts about your assets and liabilities. We recommend that every client consider each of the following documents as a part of an estate plan:

A Will or Will Substitute (e.g., a living trust) that disposes of your assets. Your will is your final declaration of how your assets and family (e.g., guardianship of minors) should be treated after your death. As such, it needs to be thought out carefully and deal with all of the potential issues that may face your survivors. Many clients want “simple” wills, but fail to realize the importance of a well-drafted will.

For example, we represented an estate several years ago in which a woman had a child by a drug dealer who had been in and out of prison for years. The man never had seen the child or provided support. The child and the mother were injured in the same car accident. The woman died immediately and the child died 12 hours later. The lawyer who drafted her will provided that all of her assets passed to her son at her death. He held the assets for 12 hours and then, in accordance with state inheritance law, the drug dealer inherited the entire estate of his son, including several million dollars resulting from the death of the woman and her child. It was a simple will, but it certainly did not do what she would have wanted.

Your will has a number of purposes, including:

- Providing for how your assets should be disposed of at your death.
- Choosing people who will make decisions when you are gone.
- Creating trusts for heirs who may lack the maturity or talent to manage inherited assets.
- Providing for the guardians of any minor children.
- Minimizing any state and federal estate taxes.
- Reducing the state and federal income taxes of heirs.
- Minimizing the sources of potential conflicts among your family members.

It is amazing how many people either do not have a will or do not know their prior will was revoked.

Failure to have a will can result in significant problems, including for example:

- In many states, each child and the surviving spouse will inherit an equal percentage (with the surviving spouse inheriting some minimum amount). Thus, for example, in Georgia, a deceased husband with no will and two children from a prior marriage may convey only 33.3% of his estate to his surviving wife. Because a trust is not established by a will, any children may be entitled to receive assets by age 18 — before they may be mature enough to handle the money. Ex-spouses may have control of the inheritance until the children reach age 18.

- If a couple with no children were injured in the same accident and one spouse survived the other by five minutes and then died, that spouse's relatives could inherit all of the couple's joint estate with the other spouse's family receiving no assets.
- The courts will have no insights into your choice of guardian for minor children. In the absence of a declaration from you, the courts will have to make an independent judgment, based upon the family members who request guardianship.
- The courts will have to decide on the person(s) to manage your assets for any minor children. Do you really want that brother-in-law, who has been bankrupt twice, to manage the funds? If you do not leave a will making such a designation, he could be given control.
- The failure to have a will can significantly increase both the income taxes and estate taxes payable by your family.

A Personal Property Disposal List is of critical importance. We have seen more family conflict over insubstantial personal property than over any other issue. Ask your children what assets they would want if you are gone and then prepare a detailed list (perhaps with pictures) directing how the assets should pass. In many states, if properly referenced in your will, this list will be enforceable legally. If your children are too young, use the list to describe which assets (e.g., family heirlooms) you want your Personal Representative to hold for the children until they are more mature. If you are married, you should consider preparing a list describing which assets belong to you and which assets belong to your spouse — especially if you have children from a prior marriage.

The Family Love Letter is designed to provide basic information to your family about your assets, liabilities and personal desires upon your death or incapacitation.

Proper Beneficiary Designations. Perhaps one of the most common mistakes in estate planning is naming the wrong beneficiaries of life insurance policies and retirement funds. You may not remember who you named as beneficiary or previous designations may be no longer valid because of changes in your wealth or family circumstances. Have you taken your ex-spouse off your retirement plan or life insurance beneficiary designation?

Every three to four years obtain a written confirmation from your life insurance carrier and retirement plan administrator of your designated beneficiaries. Do not designate minor children as beneficiaries (even as contingent beneficiaries), because they may inherit the assets at age 18. Instead, pass the assets into a trust to be held until the heirs have reached sufficient maturity to handle the money. Such trusts must have special language in them or the income taxes on the retirement plan may be accelerated. Consult with a competent tax attorney.

TAKE NOTE:

Beware: It almost never makes sense to name your estate (or by failing to name a beneficiary naming your estate) as beneficiary of your retirement plans or IRAs. In most cases, it will cause an acceleration of the income taxes that could have been deferred.

A Living Will is your declaration that you do not desire life-sustaining treatment if there is no significant hope of recovery. In the Nancy Cruzan decision, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that, to be taken off life support (including intravenous nourishment and fluids), you must have declared your desire before becoming incapacitated. A 1992 study in the Archives of Internal Medicine reported that having a living will or medical power of attorney saved more than $60,000 per patient in the final stay in the hospital. Even though you may be young and in good health, remember that Nancy Cruzan, Karen Ann Quinlan and Terri Schiavo were all young women in their late 20s and early 30s when they became incapacitated. In each case, the failure to have medical directives upon incapacity created tremendous emotional and financial costs to their families.

A Medical Power of Attorney (sometimes called a Durable Healthcare Power of Attorney) also may be necessary. While a living will is simply your declaration not to use life-sustaining measures, a medical power of attorney is designed to grant someone the power to make any medical decisions for you upon your incapacity. Although a living will also deals with life-sustaining issues, we generally recommend signing both a medical power of attorney and a living will. Having a medical power of attorney generally assures that the family, not the doctors, have the final say in such treatment. However, if it is clear that life cannot be sustained, the power holder can step away and allow the living will to take affect. "This is his decision, not mine" can make it much easier psychologically for the power holder and the family.

A Durable General Power of Attorney provides for whoever will manage your assets upon your incapacity. In some states, such a document has to provide specifically that it survives your incapacity, and so it is always wise to make sure such language is in the document. Moreover, such a document should be drafted with extraordinary detail to assure that your power holder has as much authority as possible. A short document of minimal detail that grants “all authority” to your power holder can create significant restrictions for the power holder in making decisions and in handling tax issues. In many states, the document can be drafted so it is not triggered until you become incapacitated.

Materials on Ethical Wills

Barry Baines, Ethical Wills: Putting Your Values on Paper (M.D. Presus Publishing, 2002). Available at www.ethicalwill.com along with other books and materials on ethical wills.

Jack Riemer and Nathaniel Stampfer, So That Your Values Live On: Ethical Wills and How to Prepare Them (Jewish Lights Publishing, 1991).

Elaine Tiller, Ethical Wills, Spiritual Bequests (Baptist Senior Adult Ministries, Washington, DC, 1996).

An Ethical Will. Increasingly, clients are adding ethical wills to their lists of estate planning documents. An ethical will is not a formal document. It has no set format or required content. Instead, it is designed to accommodate the unique personalities, family structure, values and thoughts of one generation for the next. Perhaps one of the best descriptions is: “Ethical wills are windows into the souls of those who write them. It is this that makes them so cherished by family members from generation to generation.” One author has indicated three principal purposes of an ethical will: (1) Leaving an Intangible Legacy, (2) Personal Satisfaction and (3) Aiding the Estate Planning Process. At the end of The Family Love Letter, we have provided a place for you to begin an ethical will. Many clients will draft a more comprehensive statement and attach it to their Family Love Letters.

Finding an Estate Planner

We believe you should use competent counsel to draft these documents. One place to find such attorneys is at Martindale Hubbell, which provides the background of attorneys, their specialties, and how they are rated in their areas of competence by other attorneys. Another source is the National Association of Estate Planners and Councils, which provides a list of estate planning professionals throughout the United States. Because mistakes even in simple estates can create inadvertent estate taxes and income taxes, I generally advise clients to use an estate planner who regularly does estate planning and who has a working knowledge of state and federal income taxes and estate taxes.

Reviewing the Process

How often should you review your documents? I generally advise clients to review their documents at least every two to three years or when a significant change occurs, such as marriage, divorce, birth of a child or grandchild, or receipt of a significant inheritance. Remember: “Estate planning is a process, not a conclusion. The conclusion begins when you are gone.” Your documents will continue to change and evolve as your personal and family situations change.

You are the only one who can leave this information, and your failure to make adjustments as your life changes may create potential major turmoil for your family. Your death or incapacity is enough of a family tragedy without adding to it by not updating your information and plans. Reviewing these documents every decade or so is not advisable — not even remotely.

TAKE NOTE:

Keep your important papers in a fireproof safe and in sealed plastic to keep them from being destroyed in a fire or flood.

My Notes

My Investment Strategy

Whether you're saving for your retirement, setting up a college funding program or putting money away for a dream vacation, determining an asset allocation mix that best suits your investment needs is as much a personal as it is a technical endeavor. Some factors you should consider when choosing how you'll invest include: your investment objective, your investment time horizon, your tolerance for risk, your ongoing financial situation and your personal investment experience. This understanding will help determine the types of investments you'll select to work toward your specific goals and objectives. Are you still on track with your goals and objectives?

This is the type of investor that I am. I have ranked the following concerns from 1 (low) to 6 (high). I have avoided duplicating the same ranking for any two of these six concerns. Relating to this chart, I am concerned principally with my surplus money, which has been saved or invested or will be saved or invested, and any money I may win or inherit. It is the growth, protection and eventual use of this capital that I am addressing as I complete this chart. Here are my thoughts concerning these particular aspects of, or conditions which may impact, my investments.

Question	1	2	3	4	5	6
Concerns about Safety of Principal: How concerned am I about taking steps so that, as my money is being invested, I do not lose my invested principal? (My higher score indicates a desire for safer investments. A lower score indicates I am less concerned — accepting that some risk comes with potential for greater gain.)
Concerns about Liquidity: How concerned am I that my funds be available to me for cash needs or cash emergencies? Can I easily convert my investments to cash — virtually on a moment's notice?
Concerns about My Investments Providing Current Income: Do I anticipate needing income from my investment this year?
Concerns about Tax Advantages: How concerned am I about my investments providing me with the best level of tax advantages that I qualify for and which are appropriate for my situation?
Concerns about Inflation: How concerned am I about my savings or investments keeping pace with inflation as time goes on?
Concerns about the Actual Benefit to My Family: How concerned am I that my investment mix may be too complex or difficult for my family to step in and manage without a lot of outside help?

If I become incapacitated, I would like my decision-makers to utilize the following general approach to managing my investments: _____

Titling of Assets

The next section of The Family Letter discusses the assets you own. Equally important for probate, disposition, income tax and estate tax purposes is how your assets are titled. We strongly recommend that you meet with a competent advisor(s) and review with him/her the following topics:

- Are your assets properly titled so they pass in the manner you want?
- Are your assets properly titled to minimize state & federal estate taxes?
- Are your assets properly titled to minimize state & federal income taxes?
- Are your assets properly titled to minimize the claims of creditors?
- Are your retirement plan's & IRA's primary & contingent beneficiaries correct?
- Are the correct persons named as owners & beneficiaries of your life insurance?
- Are there other titling issues that need to be correct?

My Retirement Assets

Social Security Fill out this section only if you are receiving Social Security Benefits

The Social Security program is a government-operated retirement plan that provides monthly income to retirees. It was designed to meet the basic needs of retirees. Keep in mind that most people need 70%–80% of their pre-retirement income to maintain the same standards of living, and Social Security income is typically much lower than that. For more information, please call 800-722-1213 or visit www.socialsecurity.gov/mystatement.

Individual Retirement Accounts (IRAs)

The most common personal plan, IRAs are tax-deferred retirement accounts. They can be set up using money markets, mutual funds or annuities. There are several types:

Traditional IRAs — Used primarily by individuals without pensions or 401(k)s and funded with pre-tax dollars.

Rollover IRAs — In which funds from another qualified retirement plan (e.g., 401(k) or profit-sharing plan) have been placed in a pension IRA.

Spousal IRA — An IRA you received from a spouse that has not been rolled over to your own account.

Roth IRAs — Often supplement 401(k)s and are funded with after-tax dollars. Many people have more than one IRA account and have accumulated sizeable sums for retirement income.

SEP (Simplified Employee Pension Plan) IRAs — An employer-sponsored plan, it can be opened by the smallest of businesses, even if there is only one employee. It enables individuals to contribute the most toward their own and their employees' retirement without getting involved in a more complex qualified plan such as the 401(k).

SIMPLE (Savings Incentive Match Plan for Employees) IRAs — Similar to the SEP IRA, it is a small business retirement plan used primarily in companies with less than 100 employees that want to provide an alternative to a qualified profit-sharing plan.

Qualified Retirement Plans

Some employers still offer traditional pensions, known as defined benefit plans, which guarantee a certain level of income for the rest of your life. The amount is calculated based on your term of service and level of compensation. A 401(k) (or similar) defined contribution plan is a tax-deferred retirement account and more commonly offered today. Often employee contributions are matched up to a certain percentage by the employer. For many people, their 401(k) accounts are, with the exception of their homes, their biggest assets.

Military Retirement Benefits

Unlike most retirement plans, the Armed Forces offer a pension (technically, a “reduced compensation for reduced services”) with benefits that start the day of retirement. Many veterans of wartime service are completely unaware of the fact that, if they are 65 or older and on a limited income, they may qualify for a Veterans Disability Pension or a Veterans Pension without being disabled.

When a military retiree dies, their retirement pay stops. This means that the surviving spouse will be left without a substantial income source. If you are a retiree, you need to give serious thought to how you can protect your spouse from the hardships caused by the loss of your retirement pay. One option available is the Survivor Benefit Plan. The SBP is an insurance plan that helps pay surviving spouses a monthly payment (annuity) to help make up for the loss of retirement income.

My Stock Options/Stock Purchase Plans/Stocks

A stock option gives the recipient (the “optionee”) the right to buy a certain number of shares in the granting company at a fixed price for a certain number of years. Stock options are used both in private companies and public companies. A related type of plan is the employee stock purchase plan (ESPP), which is used mainly in public companies. An ESPP is a little like a stock option plan. It gives employees the chance to buy stock, usually through payroll deductions, over a 3- to 27-month “offering period.” The price is usually discounted up to 15% from the market price. Stocks are shares in the ownership of a company issued to raise capital, also known as equities. As we all know, stock prices rise and fall.

Annuities

Annuities are tax-deferred retirement savings vehicles. An annuity is a contract between you and an insurance company in which you pay money into an account in exchange for a guaranteed payment later. Fixed annuities offer a fixed rate of return and fixed payments. Variable annuities generally offer a range of investment options, so they are subject to market risk and payment amounts will vary. Deferred annuities allow contributions over a period of years and are designed for accumulation of assets. The funds for an immediate annuity come from a single contribution (from a 401(k), for example) and payout begins within that year.

My Bonds

A bond is issued by the government or a corporation to raise capital and generally pays a fixed rate for a specific amount of time (until it reaches maturity). Generally, bonds are less volatile than stocks, and do not yield as high a return over the long term. Among the types of bonds you can choose from are: U.S. government securities, municipal bonds, corporate bonds, mortgage and asset-backed securities, federal agency securities and foreign government bonds. You can buy individual bonds, bond mutual funds or unit investment trusts.
